The imprisoned Baptist maintains his group of disciples. They and John himself were surprised that the promised Messiah, Jesus of Nazareth, is merciful and approachable, not tough and unattainable like they anticipated. Christ repeats his prophetic program before the Baptist’s disciples: the sick are healed, the poor are comforted and salvation prevails over judgment. In any case, he does not recognize the greatness of his precursor and the validity of his mission. In the Church diverse voices always coexist but they must be united in mission.
