Thoughts for prayers SHALOM

These days, we feel life is becoming more difficult. There are times when our faith, as followers of Jesus, is challenged, and we struggle to do what is right. At times, it may seem as though it is alright to compromise our beliefs, so that we may get on in the world and with people around us. We may justify our actions by thinking, why not, everybody is doing it and as though it is alright to compromise our beliefs, so that we may get on in the world and with people around us. We may justify our actions by thinking, why not, everybody is doing it and

The conservative group of the Sadducees wants to entangle Jesus in the thorny discussion regarding the levirate to catch him at fault. It is the policy of forcing the brother to marry the widow of his brother and to protect the family inheritance because the fruit of the union is considered legally the son of the deceased brother. The Sadducees see the irony of the fate of these unions in the afterlife. Christ does not wish to see the irony of the fate of these unions in the afterlife. Christ does not wish to enter into legalistic complications or trivial pursuits but he simply and vehemently underlines the fundamental point: communion with God.

Times may be difficult and challenging. However, it does not excuse us from compromising the teachings of our Lord.

Lord, help me always to be faithful to You.
